The Hewig House was built in 1850 along the shores of the Kinderhook creek, shortly after the town of Stuyvesant separated itself from the previously known name of Kinderhook Landing. A quintessential salt box style house in a setting exactly as it may have been when first constructed. Lush walkways with gardens and diverse plant life, give way to a charming front porch entrance. Boasting period craftsmanship and wide plank floors, you'll be welcomed and entranced by the warmth and open layout of the kitchen. Small in size, but big on natural light - the large picture windows in the living room perfectly frame the pastoral view of the locale. Upstairs, two rooms separated by a shared wall, ideal for use apart from each-other or combined. The bucolic property is speckled with outbuildings galore; a chicken coop, a garden shed and an expansive barn style garage with bi-folding doors to store large machinery or for potential use as a workshop. Relax in the three season room to the back of the house, where you can enjoy nature within the comforts of your home. Truly a classic Hudson Valley property, where the landscape changes beautifully with the seasons. A bike ride to the Stuyvesant Falls to swim or picnic, farm fresh produce stands surround, and the Hudson River runs close by. 2.5 hr north of NYC. 20 min to Hudson Amtrak, minutes to skiing, hiking, fishing, and paddling.
